Fred Ward : Jokes from the Internet (Fred Ward Gem) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Jokes from the Internet (Fred Ward Gem):

Not all of the jokes are politically correct, of course--but no worse than Governor Ventura's in-your-face honesty. Ward has gone to the trouble of categorizing the jokes by chapters so if you don't like dumb blonde jokes, skip that chapter. This may well be the first in a long series of joke books since Ward has included his email address and no doubt will be inundated with jokes from the internet. 0 of 0 people found the

From the moment I set eyes on this book, my only thought was: "Why didn't I think of that!" This book is a riot from beginning to end. The perfect gift. I give it six stars (five stars for the book; a bonus star for the Dan Quayle section). Do yourself a favor and buy it.

ExtremelyI enjoyed Jokes from the Internet by Fred Ward, but I have just read better. McFool's Internet Humor has an incomparable collection of Internet jokes and stories. Ward's book is good, but McFool's is better.

Laugh your way through every day. The Internet has become the main distribution route for jokes around the world. For more than a year Fred Ward collected the jokes that poured into his computer daily. When they nummbered 100,000, he stopped and edited the mass down to the best, 1800 truly topical and funny jokes. Organized into 28 chapters (such as Animals, Blondes, Bumper Stickers, Celebrities, Ethnic, Lawyers, Movies, Office, Men, Rednecks, Religion, Sex, Sports, and Women), it's easy to laugh with a favorite topic or just dip in anywhere for a surprise. More than 800 cartoon graphics add to the humor.

About the Author
This joke book is a total departure from Fred Ward's Gem Book Series. For fourteen years he created, wrote, and photographed National Geographic Magazine's legendary gemstone series. Then he greatly expanded his classic work into an 8-book gem series, complete with new photographs and text. After spending most of every day at his computers assembling and editing gem books, Fred relaxes with jokes, which arrive in profusion daily from around the world. This is his opportunity to share them with you.
