Jacqueline Horsfall : Kids' Silliest Riddles before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Kids' Silliest Riddles:

By Michael Carl Debenedictis My nephew is 8 and - for all of his deep philosophical, science, mathematical, and contemplative, intellectual sides - has a completely fun and joyously grade-school kid side that revels in silly jokes and usual little kid humor. He loves reading "Nate the Great" and "Diary of a Wimpy Kid" and loves reading (and retelling) jokes and riddle from books like these too. I haven't personally read this entire book, but have heard enough of these jokes - and those from other books like this one - to know it's a hit with kids who have a sweet, silly, but intellectual disposition and love reading. I recommend it. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. I would have waited a year or two to send ...By Catherine Sarnecky I would have waited a year or two to send this to my grandson. He's 3-1/2 and very bright (remembers jokes once he's heard them). Knock Knock jokes are for a little older child. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Retarded "riddles" makes you cry By Mark Twain I cannot believe how retarded these "riddles" are. If the shipping would not be more than the book itself, I would return instantly. This way I can just "donate" to my local library. Not worth the paper it's printed on. Hope the author has a full time job.

Picnic pranks and monkeyshines, knock-knocks and lots of yuks! From beach bloopers and garden goofies to fast-food freak-outs and pucks and yucks, every riddle here will make you giggle uncontrollably. What do cats carry to picnics? Mice chests. What kind of monkey can fly? Hot-air baboons. Why was the martial arts expert sick? He had kung flu. Why do dogs like to eat at Italian restaurants? For the paws-ta. And the delightfully silly drawings throughout make everything even funnier. You'll want to share the laughs with all your pals. A Selection of Scholastic Book Clubs.
